WELCOME

Letter from the Mayor

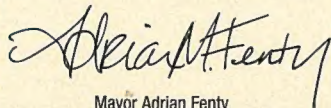

It's my pleasure to welcome you to Washington, DC—The American Experience. As you'll soon discover, the nation's capital is a dynamic and thriving cultural center, home to some of the world's most famous museums and historic sites, award-winning theatres, innovative restaurants and world-class hotels.

While we're proud to be the nation's capital, Washington, DC is much more than a government town. I invite you to look beyond the federal buildings and national monuments to discover our historic, diverse neighborhoods, where nearly 600,000 residents live, work and play.

Arts and culture are in focus this year as Washington, DC's performing arts groups, museums and other cultural attractions join forces for Shakespeare in Washington, a six-month salute to the great playwright and his influences on visual arts, music, dance, film and other discipline, running January through June. Later this spring, art galleries and other cultural organizations will celebrate our vibrant local arts scene with ColorFieldRemix, a tribute to an art movement that got its start in Washington, DC, the Washington Color School.

Of course, we're also excited to celebrate the arrival of spring with the National Cherry Blossom Festival, Washington, DC's signature springtime event. This year marks the 95th anniversary of the gift of the trees from the people of Japan to the people of Washington, DC. Running March 31-April 15, the festival is a celebration of Japanese culture with performances, fireworks, culinary events and a parade, among other activities.

Whether you're making your first trip to the nation's capital or looking for a reason to return, we look forward to your arrival.

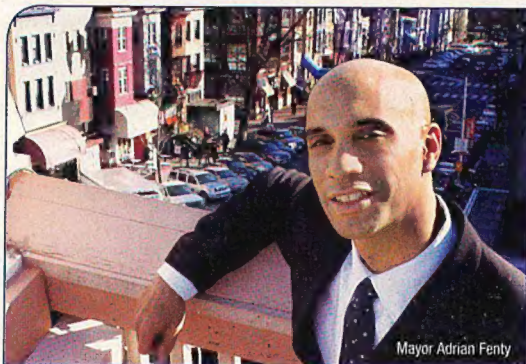

Mayor Adrian Fenty

Washington, DC grew up along the banks of the Potomac River, in a central location chosen by George Washington to satisfy northern and southern interests. Using Paris as his inspiration, city designer Pierre Charles L'Enfant fashioned the capital city with grand boulevards and ceremonial spaces. Since that time, Washington, DC has evolved into a fascinating, lively world capital, known for its vast green centers, urban spaces, sweeping memorials and majestic neoclassical architecture.

The city's most famous landmarks are clustered in and around the National Mall, spanning from the Lincoln Memorial to the US Capitol. Flanked by dozens of museums and memorials, this grassy space plays host to festivals, protests, gatherings and performances. On summer evenings, the Mall is a terrific place to catch an open-air concert, movie screening or jazz performance. In the winter, visitors head to the Mall to glide on the National Gallery of Art's skating rink.

But beyond these familiar sights, Washington, DC is a rich network of colorful neighborhoods, vibrant nightlife and noted cultural attractions. New restaurants, shops and hotels are found around every corner—from downtown to Dupont Circle. The city's neighborhoods delight visitors with walking tours, sidewalk cafés and quaint boutiques. Self-guided neighborhood heritage trails illuminate the compelling history of some of the city's most revered districts, from downtown to U Street.

As you explore Washington, DC, we invite you to immerse yourself in the American experience that you can only find in Washington, DC. It's here where you can see the original Declaration of Independence and US Constitution, marvel at the sight of the nation's monuments and memorials, dine in a world-class restaurant and take in an acclaimed theatre production—all in the same day.

During your stay here, we urge you to explore the city in a new way. Hop on board a bicycle or segway for a sightseeing tour. Luxuriate in one of the nation's finest hotels and shop for unique souvenirs in Georgetown or Logan Circle. Check out world-renowned works at the newly opened National Portrait Gallery and Smithsonian American Art Museum and dine with Washington, DC's movers and shakers at a world-class restaurant.

Use your Official Visitors Guide to find many more exciting ideas to make your visit Washington, DC an adventure. For additional assistance, please visit our website at washington.org, or ask your hotel concierge for guidance. ■

FAMILY FINDS

It's no secret that Washington, DC is a great choice for family travelers. In the nation's capital, you'll find an endless assortment of fun, educational attractions that appeal to travelers of all ages, and many of them are free of charge. Museums are interactive and engaging, and the lengthy list of noteworthy monuments, memorials and government buildings is unmatched. It's no wonder that more than half of all Washington, DC visitors bring at least one child with them.

There's a lot to see and do, and putting together the perfect Washington, DC itinerary can be a daunting task—but that's where the experts come in. Adrian M. Fenty is best known as Washington, DC's newly-elected mayor, but he's also the father of six-year-old twins Matthew and Andrew. Although Mayor Fenty's official duties keep him well-occupied, he and his wife, Michelle, find time to enjoy the city.

"Our city has so much to offer the entire family. Everyone can enjoy the Jefferson Memorial, US Capitol and appreciate historic Howard University. For kids, the National Zoo is an excellent choice. Adults can discover global cuisine, five-star hotels and shopping in our revitalized U Street district," said Mayor Fenty.

And while Washington, DC's beautiful cherry blossoms and festive Fourth of July celebration draw attention from around the world, Fenty suggests that Washington, DC is great place at any time of the year.

"We love it here year-round. In the fall, the scene is beautiful on the Mall with the trees and the changing seasons. In the summer, there are so many wonderful festivals. My family can never choose just one to attend."

Bringing the kids to Washington, DC? The Washington, DC Convention & Tourism Corporation offers the following tips to visiting families.

• PACE YOURSELF. If you just have two or three days on your visit, don't try to see everything. Make a "must-see" list and save the rest for your next trip.

• PLAN AHEAD. Tours of the White House are available but must be arranged in advance through a member of Congress.

Same-day tickets are available to tour the Capitol, but you can avoid waiting in line by calling your representative's office before you arrive. You can also beat the lines at the Washington Monument, Holocaust Museum and International Spy Museum by reserving tickets in advance.

• LOG ON. Want to know what's going on in the city during your visit? Head straight to washington.org for a complete and searchable calendar of events.

• SCORE A DEAL. Travelers generally find the best hotel rates on weekends and in late summer and winter. Visit Washington.org for special promotions and to create your own custom vacation package.

• USE PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION. On-street parking is very limited, so leave your car at your hotel. Take advantage of Metro, one of the world's most convenient, safe and clean subway systems. One-day unlimited ride passes are $6.50; weekly passes are $22. The Circulator bus connects Georgetown and Downtown with Union Station and the National Mall for $1 per trip.

• TOUR AT "OFF-PEAK" HOURS. Look for special seasonal hours at select museums. Washington, DC's beautiful memorials and monuments are open 24 hours—visit them at dawn or at night when they are lighted and less crowded.

GOT A QUESTION?

Answers to common visitor inquiries can be found at Washington.org. Click on "Frequently Asked Questions," or check the Travel Update page for details and procedures. Still searching? Call 1-800-422-8644 or send an email to info@washington.org so that we can assist you. ■

Kid-Friendly Activities

Museums, attractions and tour companies roll out the red carpet to welcome families traveling with children, enriching family vacations with hands-on activities, kid-friendly tours, story hours, arts and crafts.

• For budding artists: The Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden's "Gallery Tales for Tots" programs introduce children to contemporary art through interactive activities and story telling. Through the Sackler Gallery's "ImaginAsia" program, kids visit a featured exhibition with a special guide written for children and create an art project to take home.

• For future Presidents: Washington Walks' family-friendly walking tours reveal little-known bits of trivia about the White House and the National Mall. Kids can also learn more about Abraham Lincoln and Franklin Delano Roosevelt through Washington Walks' themed tours at their respective memorials.

• For future architects, builders and engineers: The National Building Museum serves up an ongoing menu of activities in its Building Zone that teach kids the basics for building bridges and arches, crafting paper airplanes and more. At the National Cathedral, kids can explore the unique features of gothic architecture. Through special tours, kids can also acquaint themselves with the Cathedral's fascinating collection of gargoyles—including one that looks like Darth Vader!

• For animal lovers and future veterinarians: The National Zoo is a must-see. Zoo volunteers are frequently on hand for animal talks and feedings. The Zoo's Kid's Farm lets children get up close and personal with friendly animals as they lend a hand on an on-site farm.

Q: What keeps me in Washington, DC?

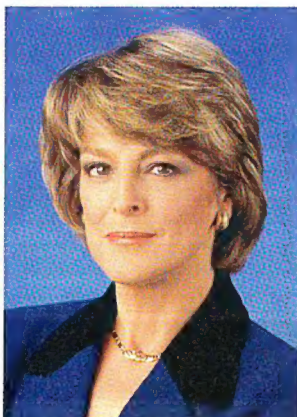

A: I was born in Washington, but never expected to return here to live. But I came back and joined CBS News and there has always been something far too exciting on the news front to ever make me consider leaving.

Q: What I love about DC:

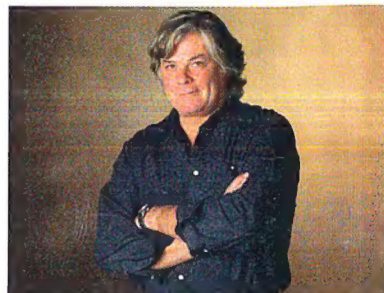

A: It's glamorous and exciting and low key and relaxing at the same time. I love the height restrictions that keep it from becoming the asphalt jungle. I still get a thrill flying above the monuments into Reagan National Airport.

Q: What to do when company comes to town:

A: Head for the newly refurbished Smithsonian American Art Museum and National Portrait Gallery, then take in a show at the Kennedy Center. Kids love the International Spy Museum, and everyone is moved by the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. The Shakespeare Theatre is another favorite...even when it's not playing Shakespeare.

In this "breaking news" town, it's no surprise to find some of the world's biggest media outlets and most recognized journalists. In addition to The Washington Post, CNN and USA Today, you'll also find the headquarters of National Geographic, National Public Radio, Voice of America radio network and XM Satellite Radio, with AOL/ Time Warner just across the Potomac in Northern Virginia.

Born: Leopoldville, Belgian Congo

Home: Palisades neighborhood of Northwest Washington

Q: What's your inspiration?

A: The world, my wife, my kids...in an order that changes by the minute.

Q: What I love about DC:

A: That I can see the sky! Also that it's America's most European city: it has majestic architecture, neighborhoods with character, and tradition and authenticity without sidestepping modernity.

Q: My favorite haunts and neighborhood spots:

A: Eastern Market, FDR Memorial, C&O Canal and bike path, the view of the Potomac from the Chain Bridge at sunrise, Sushi-ko and Black Salt, The Phillips Collection, the Uptown Theatre, "The Awakening" statue at Hains Point, Dupont Circle at the sixes--am and pm, Rock Creek Park combined with the zoo, and the Glen Echo Park carousel.

JACQUELINE E. TRESCOTT Reporter

Born: Jersey City, N.J.

Home: Crestwood section of Northwest Washington

Q: Why DC?

A: I love the open spaces and parks in downtown Washington, the walkability in many areas, and the people I have met in the 36 years I have lived here.

Q: What to do when company comes to town:

A: That's a range--the art and history shows at the museums; the newest restaurants, especially the seafood and southern ones, in Washington, Alexandria and Silver Spring, and walking around.

Q: If someone is interested in visiting Washington, DC, I'd recommend reading or seeing:

A: "All the President's Men"—both the film and the book. "Black Georgetown Remembered" by Kathleen Lesko. "River, Cross My Heart" by Breena Clarke. Or, any of the Harrison Ford and Denzel Washington movies filmed in Washington, DC.

SHAKESPEARE IN WASHINGTON

This season, it's the Bard meets the Beltway as more than sixty of Washington, DC's cultural institutions join in a six-month tribute to a literary legend with Shakespeare in Washington. Conceived by Kennedy Center President Michael M. Kaiser and Shakespeare Theatre Company Artistic Director Michael Kahn, the festival steps beyond the stage to explore the Bard's influences on art, film, dance, opera and music.

Home to dozens of world-class cultural attractions, the nation's capital is also home to a cast of residents and visitors who find real connections with the Bard's themes and characters.

"In Washington there's such a large audience of people who are hungry for entertainment that excites them, but also challenges them and makes them think. Shakespeare deals with power, politics, family dynamics, war and peace—themes that are very immediate to the people of Washington. It's an opportunity to provide them with art that will help them to better understand the world," said Kahn.

The festival's featured events and productions offer new and different interpretations of the Bard's familiar story lines and characters, incorporating music, dance and multimedia. The Smithsonian Jazz Masterworks Orchestra pays tribute to DC native Duke Ellington with a performance of Such Sweet Thunder, also known as The Shakespearean Suite (May 20). Throughout the festival, the AFI Silver Theatre will screen several classic film productions based on the Bard's works on the big screen.

"What makes this festival unique is that you can explore Shakespeare's work in a dance, theatre or musical context. So if a Shakespearean novice were particularly interested in dance, perhaps seeing A Midsummer Night's Dream performed by the New York City Ballet would be a wonderful introduction. This would also hold true for true aficionados who know the works well; jazz great Dame Cleo Laine performing 'Shakespeare and All That Jazz,' I am sure will prove to be a delightful and different evening," said Kaiser.

Indeed, festival provides something for everyone. For dance lovers, the Washington Ballet's 7X7: Shakespeare takes inspiration from the classic works to unveil seven, seven-minute world premiere pieces by innovative choreographers. Ballet aficionados will also enjoy the Kirov Ballet's Romeo and Juliet (Jan. 16 - 21) at the Kennedy Center. For an off-beat blend of theatre and dance, there's the Expressions Dance Company production of Virtually Richard3, an audaciously original look at Richard III, presented by the Washington Performing Arts Society. >>

Shakespeare's influences on visual arts can be seen at the National Gallery of Art, where the Dante Gabriel Rossetti chalk drawing Desdemona's Death Song appears as the centerpiece of a special exhibition, The Artist's Vision: Romantic Traditions in Britain (through Mar. 18). The Phillips Collection also has a role, drawing from its permanent collection to present two works by American master Albert Pinkham Ryder, including Macbeth and the Witches and Desdemona.

The Suzanne Farrell Ballet's Romeo and Juliet, Jun. 6 - 10

The off-stage offerings are unparalleled, but as Shakespeare wrote, "the play's the thing." And there's no shortage of opportunities to see his works performed by local, regional, national and international companies. Theatre buffs will get a rare opportunity to see some of the Bard's less-performed works, like Titus Andronicus (performed by the Shakespeare Theatre Company Apr. 3 - May 20) and Coriolanus (performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company Apr. 14 - May 6 at the Kennedy Center).

When it comes to the Bard's classics, you'll find them interpreted in a variety of ways. Hamlet gets a traditional staging under Kahn at the Shakespeare Theatre Company (June 5 - July 29). At the Signature Theatre, the story of the melancholy Dane is presented in Hebrew by the Cameri Theatre of Israel (Mar. 6 - 11). Synetic Theatre's Hamlet... The Rest Is Silence (June) takes an innovative approach, telling the story without any words, through movement, music and light.

If you're looking for a different take on Macbeth, The National Museum of the American Indian welcomes Alaska-based Perseverance Theatre's highly acclaimed production. The cast is comprised entirely of Alaskan Natives, and the production uses Tlingit-inspired sets and costumes plus Native language and music (Mar. 8 - 18). The Washington National Opera will stage Verdi's operatic interpretation (May 12 - June 2). Shakespeare's final play, The Tempest, also shows up in a variety of forms. The Folger

"What makes the festival unique is that you can explore Shakespeare's work in a dance, theatre or musical context."

Shakespeare Theatre's production is staged in a traditional Globe-style theatre (May 17 - Jun. 24). The Olney Theatre Centre for the Arts takes the play outdoors in a special production (Jun. 27 - 30). Montreal's 4D Art brings together virtual characters and live actors to tell the story with spellbinding multimedia visual effects (Mar. 22 - 24). Or, see the Tiny Ninja Theatre act it out using plastic ninjas and other dime-store toys to represent the characters on the Kennedy Center Millennium Stage.

"We're celebrating the man of the Millennium and how he's influenced every other form of art in a way that no other individual has, and in a way that's never been done before. The festival is not just about Shakespeare's works alone, but how he has inspired artists working in other media," said Kahn.

Showing their own brand of inspiration, Washington, DC's hotels have borrowed from the Bard to create themed getaway packages with rates starting at $129. Packages are available exclusively online at www.washington.org or by calling 1-800-422-8644.

- 18 Getting Here & Around
- 22 Regularly Scheduled Tours

Washington, DC is one of the easiest cities to reach. A convenient Mid-Atlantic location combines with comprehensive rail service and three major airports that offer flights on both major carriers and low-cost airlines.

Once you arrive, the streets are wide and welcoming. Our world-class Metro subway system serves much of the District of Columbia, including downtown and Capitol Hill, as well as the outlying suburbs of Northern Virginia and Southern Maryland. A new bus system, the DC Circulator, provides fast and easy access to the city's most popular points and recently began a route on the National Mall. And being the nation's capital and one of the nation's largest cities, taxis are never in short supply.

[PUBLIC TRANSIT]

Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority

600 5th St. NW · Washington, DC · (202) 962-1576 · wmata.com · Metrorail and Metrobus are the safest, cleanest and most efficient ways to get around Washington. Five rail lines and extensive bus service connect Washington, DC with Maryland and Virginia suburbs. Train lines are named for colors: red, yellow, blue, green, and orange. Station entrances are marked by brown pylons, capped with the letter M and colored stripes indicate which lines are available in that station. Metrorail route maps are posted in each station and inside each subway car. Metro opens at 5 am, Mon. - Fri. and 7 am. on Sat. and Sun. Metro closes at midnight Sun. - Thur. and 3 am Fri. and Sat. Base subway fare is $1.35 and increases during rush hours and for longer trips. Rail farecards are inserted into the turnstile gates to enter and exit subway platforms. The fare is automatically deducted each time you exit a station. For an interactive trip planner for bus and rail, use The Trip Planner on the website at MetroOpensDoors.com or call customer information at (202) 637-7000. For advance farecard purchases, convention passes, group sales call (202) 962-1488 or (202) 962-1576. Farecards may be purchased from vending machines in all Metrorail stations.

Metro Manners

When using the escalators in the Metro System, always stay to the right unless you plan on walking up or down the steps immediately upon entering them. The left side of the escalator is for those walking up or down, the right side for those standing.

On Tour

As you plan your itinerary, it's important to decide how you're going to get around—and how long it's going to take. What's the best way to get from the White House to the International Spy Museum? How do I get from Georgetown to Union Station? Here are a few tips:

- Traveling on foot: Washington, DC's streets are laid out in a grid pattern, with numbered streets running north to south, lettered streets running east to west, and avenues named after states running diagonally. There are about eight blocks in a mile, so it's easy to estimate the distance between two places.
- Traveling on Metro: Our world-famous public transportation system is safe, convenient and affordable. You can plan your route by logging on to Metro's website, wmata.com, and plugging your starting point and ending point into Metro's online Trip Planner. The system will search Metrorail routes and schedules and Metrobus routes and schedules to help you reach your destination.
- Traveling by bus: DC's newest bus system, the DC Circulator, provides a quick and easy link between Georgetown and Union Station and downtown and the National Mall. Buses come through every 5 to 10 minutes between 7 am and 9 pm, and it's just $1 to ride. Check out the route at dccirculator.com.

You can find more information about getting around Washington, DC at godcgo.com, which also features a handy interactive map to help you plot your course, a taxi fare calculator, parking garage information and other useful tips.

NEIGHBORHOODS

WELCOME TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD(S)

Savvy travelers know heading to the neighborhood is the best way to get to know a city. From hip to historic, DC's neighborhoods are defined as much by their personalities as specific historic origins. Each is walkable, and easily accessible via Metro or DC's fun, new Christmas bus. A number of heritage trails throughout the city are marked by signs telling the unique history and heritage of each community.

[ADAMS MORGAN]

The intersection of 18th Street and Columbia Road is where this buttoned-up city goes to let its hair down. Long a multicultural hub, today its restaurant scene is a veritable global village ranging from Ethiopian and Thai to Mexican and Indian. By day, urban adventurers leisurely stroll the heritage trail and take in colorful mural art while ducking into present-day coffee shops, boutiques and bookstores. By night, festive crowds that get younger as the evenings get older fill the streets, nightclubs and bars. Metro: Woodley Park-Zoo/Adams Morgan and walk, or take a taxi. Parking is challenging at night.

[ANACOSTIA/EAST OF THE RIVER]

Follow the 11th Street Bridge across the Anacostia River to what was Washington's first planned suburb, Uniontown. Now the Anacostia Historical District, the neighborhood retains its late 19th century architecture and working class feel. The great abolitionist Frederick Douglass made his home here at Cedar Hill. His residence is now a National Park Service site open to the public. Also explore African-American history and culture at the Smithsonian's Anacostia Museum located in this Southeast community. Metro: Anacostia

[BROOKLAND/NORTHEAST]

DC's Brookland neighborhood is nicknamed "Little Rome," and for good reason. It's home to more than 60 Catholic institutions, from the solemn grandeur of the Franciscan Monastery to the reflective beauty of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. Catholic University of America and the Pope John Paul II Cultural Center also make their home in this Northeast neighborhood. And North America's first and most comprehensive bonsai museum can be found at the U.S. National Arboretum, a 446-acre natural paradise that features enchanting landscaped gardens, fascinating seasonal displays, intriguing aquatic plants and a unique, two-acre herb garden. Metro: Brookland/CUA

[CAPITOL HILL]

If you're addicted to C-SPAN or Sunday morning talk shows, chances are you've heard of "the Hill." Though the neighborhood itself may bear the name of the Capitol building, it stretches to include a residential district of Victorian rowhouses, parks and tree-lined streets as well as the Library of Congress, Supreme Court building, Folger Shakespeare Library, National Postal Museum and Union Station. Eastern Market (the oldest operating public market in the city) thrives on Saturdays and Sundays, Barracks Row along 8th Street SE is dotted with shops, restaurants and bars, and the Washington Nationals call RFK stadium home. Metro: Union Station; Capital South; Eastern Market

[DOWNTOWN]

Arguably the entertainment center of the city, downtown is the crossroads of the theatre, restaurant, business and museum experience. From edgy and classic productions to touring Broadway shows—Woolly Mammoth, Shakespeare, National, Warner and Ford's theatres—are within easy walking distance. Museums abound including the International Spy Museum, National Building Museum, the Marian Koshland Science Museum and the National Museum of Women in the Arts. A wide variety of hotels along with the stylish and spacious Washington Convention Center call downtown home. Chinatown is marked most noticeably by the "Friendship Arch" that was built cooperatively by the Washington city government and its sister city, Beijing and secondarily by the Chinese marks that adorn businesses from traditional Chinese restaurant mainstays and more contemporary shops like Benetton and Aveda. Penn Quarter is a moniker for an area of downtown that has witnessed a "rags-to-riches" transformation including luxury condos rising above historic facades. Metro: Gallery Pl-Chinatown, Metro Center, Archives-Navy Mem'l-Penn Quarter

[DUPONT CIRCLE/KALORAMA]

Named for the circle where Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire avenues meet with P and 19 streets, Dupont Circle itself is the meeting place for this cosmopolitan neighborhood. It's perfect for people-watching, playing a pick-up game of chess or sipping a latte or chai while sitting on the edge of the fountain. Arts and entertainment collide with an impressive mix of restaurants, shops, hotels, quaint B&B's, galleries and museums (The Phillips Collection, The Textile Museum, Woodrow Wilson House and National Geographic Society's Explorers Hall to name a few). Embassy Row radiates from the circle with the largest concentration of the city's 150 international embassies. Metro: Dupont Circle

[FOGGY BOTTOM]

Between the White House and Georgetown lies Foggy Bottom, named for the fog that rose off of the Potomac. The neighborhood is a mixture of residences, office buildings (like IMF and World Bank), restaurants and hotels. George Washington University, the infamous Watergate complex and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, one of the nation's premier performing arts institutions and home to the acclaimed National Symphony Orchestra, are all located in this section of town. Metro: Foggy Bottom-GWU

"...explore Georgetown, a historic neighborhood of narrow tree-lined streets, some still with cobblestones, and historic homes and churches. And the best way to see Georgetown is to get lost there."

—New York Times

1918-1919

"A decade or so of gentrification and new building projects...have transformed...neighborhoods like Logan Circle and Penn Quarter into hot spots for theater, restaurants and galleries."

— National Geographic Traveler

[GEORGETOWN]

Hop the bright red and silver Circulator bus to this prestigious neighborhood. At once historic and hip, Georgetown's cobblestoned streets are lined with some of the most famous names in fashion, boutiques featuring a number of up-and-coming local designers and restaurants and bars attracting a well-heeled clientele. Hotels range from luxurious to all-suite family-friendly properties. The waterfront district is centered on Wisconsin and M streets, NW and is home to Georgetown University, Tudor Place Historic House and Garden, Kreeger Museum, Old Stone House and the C&O Canal with 180 miles of biking and hiking trails.

Chinatown in the Penn Quarter neighborhood

[LAFAYETTE SQUARE]

When it was named, Lafayette Square was a place of elegance, refinement and power — adjacent to the White House. Today it showcases buildings with dramatic architecture along with statues and sculptures whose fascinating stories reflect the history of the city and the nation. Prominence is the order of the day in this area of town, which is home to the Corcoran Gallery of Art, founded nearly 150 years ago for the purpose of "encouraging American genius"; Decatur House Museum, one of the city's oldest surviving homes; the magnificent Beaux Arts Old Executive Office Building, Smithsonian's Renwick Gallery, St. John's Church and DAR Constitution Hall. Metro: Farragut West, McPherson Sq

[SOUTHWEST/WATERFRONT]

South of the National Mall is a neighborhood home to the award-winning Arena Stage (the first theater company to be awarded a Tony Award outside of New York), Benjamin Banneker Circle and Fountain, the Titanic Memorial and L'Enfant Plaza. The scenic waterfront area features a shimmering array of piers, sailboats, yachts, fishing boats, seafood markets, and restaurants. Sight-seeing cruises depart from the marina regularly. Though once a working-class, immigrant neighborhood Southwest was revitalized through early urban renewal programs in the 1950s. Revitalization has come to the waterfront once again, with the opening of the Mandarin Oriental Hotel and the Portals, a luxury office and condominium development. Metro: Waterfront-SEU

[U STREET/SHAW]

The birthplace of Duke Ellington and the center of Washington's African-American nightlife for much of the 20th century is once again thriving. Many neighborhood haunts are gathering spots, from the new Bohemian Busboys & Poets (named for Langston Hughes) to the landmark, soulful Ben's Chili Bowl (Bill Cosby loves the half-smokes). On weekend nights, U Street rivals Adams Morgan for crowds, though with a slightly older vibe. "The cutting edge of what this city is and can be," U Street is also equally intriguing by day, home to the African American Civil War Memorial, Lincoln Theatre and Howard University. Designer home-furnishings stores, boutiques and music clubs abound near the junction of 14th & U streets. The neighborhood extends into Logan Circle and also includes Studio Theatre. Metro: U St./African-Amer Civil War Memorial/Cardozo

[WOODLEY PARK/CLEVELAND PARK]

These charming residential neighborhoods are located in upper northwest Washington, DC. This part of town is family-friendly - boasting the vast and leafy Rock Creek Park and the Smithsonian's National Zoo - home to the now-world-famous panda cub Tai Shan. Its tree-lined streets are lined with friendly boutiques, coffee shops and sidewalk cafés featuring cuisines from around the world. It's also home to the architecturally stunning National Cathedral, the world's sixth-largest cathedral. Metro: Woodley Park-Zoo/Adams Morgan, Cleveland Park

A Night on the Town

True to its reputation as a cultural capital, Washington, DC is a dynamic and prolific theatre town. World premieres, Broadway favorites and rarely performed classics appear on the calendar throughout the season and are worthy of tacking on an extra night to your visit.

Catering to educated, interested and diverse audiences, Washington, DC's theatres regularly debut works by rising playwrights and confront issues such as relationships, race, sexuality and, of course, politics.

Each season approximately 80 active professional theatres in the metropolitan area produce more than 350 productions that run for a total of more than 8,000 performances and play to more than 2 million audience members. Visit washington.org for a full line-up of performances throughout the area.
